1102 Contract Specialist as a Business Manager

Debbie Bartlett
Defense Acquisition University

Why the need for change?

- Procurement reforms;
- Increasing acquisition complexity;
- Technological changes; and
- Downsizing of the acquisition workforce.

We live a Complicated Environment

Procurement Reforms

- Defense Acquisition Improvement Act of 1990
- Government Performance & Results Act of 1993
- Federal Acquisition Streamlining Act of 1994
- Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996
- Service Acquisition Reform Act of 2003

FAR Guiding Principles

- Exercise personal initiative and sound business judgment in providing the best value product or service to meet the customer’s needs
- Exercise discretion… and comply with applicable laws and regulations in dealing with contractors
- In the absence of legal/regulatory direction consider initiative permissible if in Government’s best interest

Changing Purchasing Role

Traditional

- Independent, local organizations with limited visibility
- Reactive support role
- Limited coordination between business and purchasing
- Buyers

Strategic

- Central organizations responsible for coordinating purchases
- Proactive business relationships
- Procurement process based on cross-functional teams
- Commodity/service experts

President's Management Agenda

''We must have a Government that thinks differently, so we need to recruit talented and imaginative people to public service."

GAO Assessment

"Despite recent procurement reforms, the government still does not have a world-class purchasing system. All too often, many of the products and services the government buys cost more than expected, are delivered late, or fail to perform as expected. Significant improvements – including the skills of the acquisition workforce- are needed to produce better outcomes that mirror the practices of the nation's best commercial companies."

Changing Contracting Role

"Old School"	"New School"
Contract Specialist	Business Manager
Independent	Acquisition Team Member
Bureaucratic	Customer Driven
